Median Price of Single Family Home Dips in June For First Time In 2014

STAFF REPORTS

For the first time this year, the median price of an existing home dropped in June compared to the same month in 2013, the California Desert Association of Realtors reported.

The sales of single family homes also slipped slightly in June over June 2013, CDAR said in its monthly report. Condo sales also dropped compared to June 2013 figures.

The median price for single-family homes was $382,400 in June down from $389,000 in June 2013 while the median price of condominiums rose $28,222 in June over June 2013, the CDAR report showed.

There were 217 condo sales in June, down from 519 the same month in 2013. Condos also saw a median price boost from $203,222 last year to $231,444 in June 2014.

Health Assessment Resource Center adds new researcher, expands reach

BY KEN ALAN

HHealth Assessment Resource Center (HARC) is best known as the creator of the triennial Community Health Monitor survey. The second installment was released earlier this year, summarizing the study conducted in 2013. The research is provided free to the community and is used primarily by healthcare, government and nonprofit agencies in their strategic planning and grant writing efforts.

With three robust health studies under its belt, HARC has set its sights on expanding from its small, three-person operation to become a major healthcare research provider, both inside and outside of the Coachella Valley. CEO Eileen Packer said, "HARC is two-pronged. The other arm of HARC is our research and evaluation services, which is fee-for-service. We have to generate income in order to fund the Community Health Monitor." Packer emphasized the health survey still relies heavily on grants and donations.

Some of HARC's paying clients include the City of Palm Springs, the Susan G. Komen Foundation, which promotes breast cancer awareness; the Humana Foundation's healthy schools program; the Boys & Girls Club of the Coachella Valley; and the Alliance Healthcare Foundation, who has provided a grant for an LGBT healthcare study in San Diego. As the latter demonstrates, HARC is looking to take on client engagements outside of the Coachella Valley. "We definitely can travel anywhere," said Packer.

Closer to home, HARC will be doing projects for Act for MS (Multiple Sclerosis) in Palm Desert and Regional Access Project Foundation (the organization provides children's health services). "Act for MS has about four years of data that we'll be analyzing and developing a report from. For the Access Project Foundation we'll be developing a tool to collect data for the food insecurity program," she said.

End-users of research like the Community Health Monitor are asking to see data expressed in new ways, so HARC is working with CVEP and Redlands-based Esri to geo-code information into maps.

As professional research and data analysis firms go, Packer says HARC has no real competitors in the Coachella Valley but they do compete with out-of-market firms who do niche projects.

A new researcher, Teresa Segovia, recently joined HARC's team. Segovia's most recent position was with the Alzheimer's Association in Rancho Mirage where she was instrumental in conducting educational workshops for caregivers, while establishing and maintaining relationships in a variety of community-based organizations in her role as the Latino education and outreach coordinator. "Now there are three of us, I think we'll be more competitive. Right now Teresa is helping write scopes of services for our research and evaluation projects," said Packer.

Segovia said she was overwhelmed by the depth and breath of data HARC was able to gather for its Community Health Monitor survey. "I had no idea there was anything like that here in the Coachella Valley and I was really blown away by the disparities that are here in the valley," she said.

Segovia has a master's in psychology and wanted to join an organization like HARC as a foundation to pursue a doctoral degree at a later date. She's not sure if she'll pursue the advance degree in social psychology or public health.

Segovia, who speaks Spanish fluently, will be helping HARC translate some of its reports. In addition to the Community Health Monitor, HARC has created a number of special reports for the Coachella Valley covering topics such as snowbirds, unemployed adults, Hispanics/Latinos, uninsured adults, seniors 55 and older and a report on children ages 0-5 and 6-17. These are available online at no charge.

"There's a real need for customized research and evaluation here in the valley. I expect we'll reach out into the for-profit sector to get data for hotels and tourism—branching out from the nonprofits and government agencies that we're currently helping," said Segovia.

The Coachella Valley plays host to a cottage industry of research specialty firms including Wheeler's Market Intelligence, Innovative HR Solutions and Market Watch, to name a few. With their high skill, high wage jobs, should the valley's economic development leaders take a closer look at attracting more firms like HARC here? Segovia isn't sure. "We're not like L.A. We don't have huge businesses here and the bigger businesses are a branch of a bigger national company that does their own research in-house. But we're definitely branching out-of-market. I'll be working on the San Diego projects, for example. So, I could see us, say, doing some projects up north or another state. That would be cool. So it's just a matter of getting the word out," she said.

Packer hopes to add two more positions in the next five years if the business grows as planned. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the demand for statisticians will grow faster than average (27 percent) in the next decade. Median pay is $75,560 per year ($36.33 per hour). The demand for market research analysts will grow even faster—32 percent, with median pay of $60,300 per year ($28.99 per hour).

Segovia is one of a growing number of young, college-educated workers who grew up here, went away to college (Santa Barbara) and have returned to the Coachella Valley to find a career. "I moved away when I was 17, so I never got to check out the nightlife and things like that. So when I moved back I was really surprised to see so many things (for young adults) to do. But I have been able to find other friends my age and explore a lot of cool things here in the valley," she said.

Editor's footnote: HARC's Community Health Monitor data are available online in a searchable database that can be tailored to special interests. Select Survey Data from the main menu, then select HARC Search. Free registration is required. Search selects include demographics, access to health insurance, utilization, prevention, health behaviors, major diseases, disability, mental health, social and economic needs, weight/activity/nutrition, and a senior survey. TPR should be a welcome window of opportunity for buyers and maybe a price adjustment consideration for sellers," said Sharon Rogers, president of the California Desert Association of Realtors in Palm Desert, commenting on the June report.

"Sellers will definitely want to work with their Realtors to make sure their house is priced right according to the current market conditions in order to make a good sale. Buyers will find some good deals now too with this drop in the median price compared to June 2013," she said. And with a change in the Canadian currency, homes purchased by Canadians "have not been as brisk as we have seen earlier this year."

Distressed properties including both short sales and foreclosures continued to fall in June. They accounted for 13 percent of June sales this year compared to 18 percent in June 2013. Condos saw a reduction in distressed sales with only 6 percent falling into this category in June of this year compared to 15 percent in June 2013.

The inventory of single-family homes dropped in June compared to May. There were 2,359 single homes and 1,289 condos for sale in June compared to 2,471 single-family homes and 1,186 condos for sale in May.

The June statistics, including median and average sale prices, are based on the industry standard Multiple Listing Service in tracking sales for buyers and sellers. This report reflects sales in Bermuda Dunes, Cathedral City, Coachella, Desert Hot Springs, Indio, Indian Wells, La Quinta, Palm Desert, Palm Springs and Rancho Mirage. TPR

GAYLE HODGES AND PRIME TIME INTERNATIONAL BENEFIT GILDA'S CLUB DESERT CITIES

Gayle Hodges and prominent Coachella Valley grower Prime Time International have spearheaded a campaign that to date, has brought in $71,500 for Palm Desert-based cancer support organization Gilda's Club Desert Cities. With a goal of $75,000, the campaign is providing funds for an expansion and remodeling of the Gilda's Club kitchen, which will be named "Chuck's Wagon" in memory of the late Chuck Hodges, a Managing Partner of Prime Time.

The majority of the contributions were made during a recent fundraiser, a western-themed barbecue organized by Gayle Hodges in honor of her late husband, who passed away of kidney cancer in 2012. Among those in attendance were current Prime Time Managing Partners Mark Nickerson, Mike Way and Jeff Taylor; Nickerson presented Gilda's Club Board Chairman Paul Golden with a check for $20,000 on the company's behalf.

Gayle Hodges said, "When Chuck and I visited Gilda's, it always gave him much pleasure to share the produce from the farms with members of Gilda's Club. "Chuck's Wagon" was created to honor his giving spirit."

"Construction will begin soon," Golden said, "but there is still time for friends of Chuck and Gayle, and of Gilda's Club, to contribute to the project." For more information, please call (760) 770-5678.

KEEPING TABS ON CALIFORNIA BUSINESS AND POLITICS

DAILY

TAXES AND JOBS

By JOEL FOX

A column by journalist David Cay Johnston in the Sacramento Bee re-visited arguments made by opponents of the Proposition 30 tax increases – including me – that jobs would be killed if the taxes were increased. As pointed out in the article, California has increased jobs since the taxes took effect.

However, it was not an unreasonable assumption to make, as I'll discuss below and there is a question how many more jobs we might have if the taxes had not passed. Another Bee column by Board of Equalization member George Runner argues that the tax increases might have prevented even greater job growth that should be expected from a surging economy.

Johnston took our No on 30 position from the state's voter information guide rebuttal argument when he quoted the argument that Proposition 30 "hurts small businesses and kills jobs." As he correctly points out there are more jobs now.

The Prop 30 debate was not only about taxes and jobs as our campaign made clear—we wanted no taxes without reforms. With reforms to make better use of taxpayers' dollars and control spending, many of those opposing Prop 30 would accept some temporary taxes.

In fact, in the line before the one Johnston cited from the voter information guide, our argument urged not to give "Sacramento politicians a blank check without requiring budget, pension or education reform."

On this site, I argued for passing Proposition 1A in the 2009 Special Election ballot that included a temporary tax increase coupled with the reform of a rainy day fund. (Voters will finally get a chance to approve a rainy day fund in the November election.)

I also counseled a legislative compromise of putting both taxes and spending reforms on the ballot when Governor Brown was negotiating with Republican leaders for solutions to the state's budget deficits prior to the ballot initiative that became Proposition 30.

Our campaign was about concern for the economy, and therefore a concern for lost jobs that prompted major opposition to the tax increase without reforms.

We have the tax increases now, however, few reforms have been put in place.

California is still looking at staggering debt and pension obligations that could eat away at funds for basic services and put enormous pressure on taxpayers.

Taxes do affect economic activity. Johnston pointed out in his article that some taxes could kill jobs. When California passed an income tax increase in the early 1990s, revenue collection was below what had been predicted. Advocates for increased taxes on cigarettes and soda, for example, say increasing taxes will reduce consumption – the theory being when you raise taxes you get less of what you are taxing.

The reverse certainly has been recorded on income taxes, most notably during the John Kennedy and Ronald Reagan years, when cutting high income taxes helped lead to a surge in the economy.

We reasoned that increased income taxes at a time when the state was struggling to rise out of a recession could hurt the economy and produce a job loss, especially because small business people, who drive the engine of the economy, pay their taxes on their business activity through their income tax.

Not an unreasonable position.

However, as the record shows there was job growth since the election.

Of course, the state is not home free because of the tax increases. As reported by the California Center for Jobs and the Economy, while unemployment is down (but still fifth highest among the states), the labor force has shrunk compared to a year ago, middle class jobs are still below pre-recession levels and we are suffering a two-tiered economy in which some parts of the state are doing well where other parts of the state languish with high unemployment.

How many more jobs might have been created if Prop 30 did not pass is impossible to measure. A Los Angeles Register editorial yesterday states that California payroll employment increased 1.6 percent from November 2012, which was actually down from the increase of 1.9 percent increase in payroll employment from November 2011 to November 2012.

Was the pace slowed because some jobs were killed by the tax increase?

INDIO WATER AUTHORITY WILL WORK WITH CUSTOMERS TO AVOID WASTE AND NEW STATE-MANDATED FINES

Indio Water Authority (IWA) is expanding its water conservation programs to help residents do their part to reduce water use during California's severe and long-lasting drought. IWA is rolling out new rebates and programs, expanding their popular water audit service, and dedicating staff to help guide customers through this water conservation effort.

"We want to work with our community to prevent water waste during this historic drought," said Michael Wilson, City of Indio Mayor and IWA Board president. "We are more than doubling our conservation efforts."

The State Water Resources Control Board recently issued a mandate ordering Californians to stop outdoor water waste, or face steep fines. The state has called on agencies to impose fines for customers that wash down driveways and sidewalks, have water running from landscaped areas onto the street or sidewalk, use a hose without a shut-off nozzle to wash a vehicle, or use a fountain or water feature (without recirculating water). Furthermore, the state is asking agencies to require customers to water landscaping only twice a week, or cut overall water use by the equivalent amount.

Indio Water Authority is not asking customers to stop watering their landscaping and will not be issuing fines. IWA is asking customers to visually inspect their irrigation system to make sure the systems are working properly. In addition, IWA is planning to

Board member commitment to the Museum’s educational mission is opening new opportunities for the children and families of the Coachella Valley,” said Betsy Adamson, Executive Director of The Children’s Discovery Museum of the Desert. “We look forward to having this well-respected group of individuals guide the Museum this year.”

A SUITE MAKEOVER

Marc Russell Interiors and Mark DeCastro of MDC Contractors gifted the Palm Springs Animal Shelter (PSAS) with a makeover. The duo renovated Canine Suites One & Two, true to the unique, contemporary design Russell is known for. Modern wall coverings, bright furniture and a dog-sized flat-screen TV, give the suites and dogs, the signature Marc Russell look of “home.”

DeCastro and Marc Russell Interiors said they donated the project to help the animals get adopted and to get people into the shelter, “creating a space that looks like an actual home, will hopefully inspire adopters to take home a new pet.”

Board member Stephen Boyd says, “We could not be more thrilled, the new spaces really gives our animals an opportunity to shine. The new design accentuates how easily a shelter pet can fit into your family. We are very grateful.”

PSAS will host a ribbon cutting ceremony to celebrate the gift and thank the designers in the upcoming weeks. In the meantime, visitors are invited to stop by the shelter to see the new space, and perhaps adopt a “doggie in the window.” Before and after photos can be seen on the PSAS Facebook page. TPR

MURPHY’S LAW

By SHAUN MURPHY

Q: In return for help and support, a friend has offered to give me two and a half million shares of penny stock in his company. The stock is apparently worth $150,000. What are penny stocks and are there any risks if I take them?

A: Penny stocks are low-priced, small-cap stocks priced under $5. They aren’t usually traded on exchanges like the NYSE or NASDAQ. Penny stocks are typically found on listing services like Over-The-Counter-Bulletin-Board or in quotation publications like the Pink Sheets. Penny stocks are volatile and considered speculative investing. But their volatility is what makes them attractive. Gains of more than 1,000 percent in a few weeks’ time are not unheard of and the prospect of “getting rich quick” is what draws investors to the “pennies.” Companies that progress from penny stock to growth stock however are rare. Two principal risks inherent in penny stock investing are low liquidity and poor reporting standards. Penny stocks trade infrequently because there is a limited market and they may be difficult to sell once you own them. You could end up with a lot of worthless stock that you can’t get rid of. The other concern is loose reporting standards for companies whose stocks trade on OTCBB or in the Pink Sheets. Current information is sometimes difficult to find leading unscrupulous people to take advantage of investors.

In your situation, you should consider these and other concerns before accepting the gift even if you aren’t investing your own money. First, you will be required to pay gift tax on the value of the stock in the year in which the gift is made. Second, you will be required to open a brokerage account to hold the stock. There is typically a charge associated with holding the shares. Third, low liquidity means you may not be able to sell the shares or only in small quantities so it may take a long time to recover even the value of the tax paid and your brokerage fees. But if you don’t mind a little risk, it’s a little like getting a lottery ticket. Just don’t spend the money before you get it.

IWA is working with Indio Police Department's Code Enforcement staff to determine the best way to enforce water conservation measures, and if necessary, how fines will be issued. IWA's existing ordinance on water waste allows staff to give customers a written warning before any fines are imposed.

Expanded and new programs being offered by the IWA include: indoor conservation kits, turf removal rebates, irrigation equipment rebates, toilet and washing machine rebates, WaterSmart controller rebates, conservation workshops, hotel and restaurant programs, and a water conservation newsletter. STATE ASSEMBLYMEMBER V. MANUEL PÉREZ STATEMENT ON SIGNING OF CALIFORNIA-MEXICO ECONOMIC AGREEMENT

Assembly Majority Leader V. Manuel Pérez applauds the agreement signed today by Governor Edmund G. Brown and Mexico's Ministry of the Economy to expand trade between Mexico and California.

"Mexico is California's largest trading partner, and I have long advocated for a more coherent economic strategy, particularly for the California-Mexico border region," said Pérez. "This trade pact will advance economic cooperation, and it represents a tremendous opportunity for the Coachella-Imperial-Mexicali economic corridor."

Among the many areas of cooperation in the agreement is the ability for Mexican companies to access California's Innovation Hubs, a program strongly supported by Pérez and which was codified through his bill AB 250 (Chapter 530, Statutes of 2013). California's Innovation Hubs (iHUBs) are innovation clusters of research parks, technology incubators, and universities working together with economic development organizations, venture capitalists, and business groups in different areas of the state. The Coachella Valley iHub, based in Palm Springs and emphasizing clean technology development, is a thriving example of the program.

"This trade agreement emphasizes many of our already strong and emerging sectors, such as manufacturing, alternative energy, health, agriculture and tourism," continued the Majority Leader. "Together with the iHub program and the state's economic incentive pilot program recently secured for the Coachella Valley, the pact will help to bring new investment and job creation to our region."

Majority Leader Pérez led the legislative delegation participating in the Governor's trade and investment mission to Mexico this week.

Assemblymember V. Manuel Pérez (D-Coachella) serves as the Majority Floor

Leader of the California State Assembly. He represents the 56th district, which comprises the cities and communities of Blythe, Brawley, Bermuda Dunes, Calexico, Calipatria, Cathedral City, Coachella, Desert Hot Springs, El Centro, Holtville, Imperial, Indio, Mecca, Oasis, North Shore, Salton Sea, Thermal, Thousand Palms and Westmorland.

PAPER BY UC RIVERSIDE'S MICHAEL PAZZANI RECOGNIZED FOR PERSONALIZING INTERNET CONTENT AND LEARNING USER PROFILES

Michael Pazzani is the vice chancellor for research and economic development at UC Riverside. Photo credit: Carlos Puma.

A 1996 research paper authored by University of California, Riverside's Michael J. Pazzani and two colleagues has been selected by the Association for the Advancement of Artificial Intelligence (AAAI) to win the 2014 Classic Paper Award.

The AAAI, which promotes theoretical and applied artificial intelligence research, established the award in 1999 to honor authors of papers, chosen from a specific conference year that were deemed most influential.

"The Classic Paper Award this year is given to the paper deemed most influential from The Thirteenth National Conference on Artificial Intelligence held in Portland, Oregon in 1996," said Manuela Velosa, the president of the AAAI. "Pazzani and his colleagues are being recognized for significant contributions to the field of personalizing Internet content and learning user profiles."

Pazzani, the first author of the research paper, wrote it when he was a professor of information & computer science and cognitive science at UC Irvine. Now the vice chancellor for research and economic development at UC Riverside, he received the award today (July 29) at The 28th AAAI Conference on Artificial Intelligence (AAAI-14) in Québec City, Canada, during the opening ceremony.

The research paper in question is "Syskill & Webert: Identifying Interesting Web Sites," published in the proceedings of The Thirteenth National Conference on Artificial Intelligence (AAAI-96). Pazzani's coauthors are Jack Muramatsu and Daniel Billsus.

Their paper showed how a profile of the user can be learned by any learning algorithm from a user's feedback on any web page and how this profile can be used to predict the user's interest in web pages. By combining the system with a search engine, the paper showed how search results can be personalized and how a query can be constructed to search for content that interests the user.

"The mid-1990s were an exciting time to be a computer scientist studying machine learning," Pazzani said. "The World Wide Web was a promising area for research and just starting to take off. My colleagues and I developed one of the first general purpose systems for learning about a user's interests from the user's web browsing behavior."

Pazzani explained that today many websites personalize the presentation of content to individual users. For example, sites such as Yahoo News learn user interests. YouTube has thumbs-up and thumbs-down buttons for users to rate content, and uses this feedback to recommend videos.

"In 1996, however, the Internet experience was a one-size fits all experience," he said. "Now, the personalization of content may be the most common application of artificial intelligence encountered by the average person."

The research paper directly led to commercial applications. Pazzani and Billsus continued to develop and refine content personalization algorithms in the next few years and founded a company that personalized content for several content providers utilizing the same basic approach for users. The commercial application of the personalization was deployed on the Los Angeles Times mobile news and classified ads sites. (Later Pazzani and Billsus sold the company.)

"The project is an ideal illustration of the value of research at University of California," Pazzani said.

The research paper was the first in the AAAI conferences to explore content-based personalization during Internet browsing and searching. Having withstood the test of time, it is among the most cited from AAAI-96. Noteworthy for its experimental approach to evaluating several learning algorithms, it has been cited especially by researchers exploring more advanced approaches for collecting feedback, representing documents and learning profiles.

FIRE AND PUBLIC HEALTH OFFICIALS BROADEN DROWNING PREVENTION CAMPAIGN

In an effort to increase water safety awareness, Riverside County Department of Public Health and CAL FIRE/Riverside County Fire Department officials have produced a Spanish language public service announcement regarding drowning prevention and water safety.

The video mirrors an English version of the same message that was released in the summer of 2013 also produced by the department of public health and county fire officials.

"Children are our most precious resource and it is our responsibility to protect them. As the safety message in the video clearly states, drowning is 100 percent preventable," said Susan Harrington, Riverside County Department of Public Health.

Riverside County Fire Chief John R. Hawkins adds, "I urge every adult to constantly monitor their children. We have two eyes and they are to see and watch, particularly our children. Child drownings can be prevented by watching our children. Let's all make a pledge to prevent every drowning."

So far this year, three children have died from drowning and 20 other children have been injured from submersion or "near-drowning" accidents. Some of these cases were children swimming in backyard pools, Jacuzzis and community/apartment pools.

Public health and county fire department officials remind parents and guardians how quickly tragedy can strike when youngsters are in or around water. The public service announcement video, which features Public Health Nurse Carolina Hernandez and CAL FIRE Captain Fernando Herrera, offers viewers tips on how to keep children safe near pools, such as installing a security fence and assigning a "water watcher," who is the designated person responsible for keeping an eye on young swimmers.

ANNUAL PERIOD TO APPEAL PROPERTY TAX BILLS IS UNDERWAY

California taxpayers who disagree with local assessors' valuation of their property can contact the local assessor's office to discuss the assessment or appeal their property tax bills.

The window to file an appeal varies by county, and ends either Sept. 15 or Dec. 1. That process is only available to taxpayers who are challenging the assessed value of their property as of Jan. 1. Different appeal periods apply to taxpayers who are appealing an assessment after a property was sold, underwent new construction, or was damaged in a natural disaster or other calamity.

The California State Board of Equalization (BOE) prescribes property tax rules and instructs local agencies on how to handle property tax appeals, and seeks to make the process easy for taxpayers to navigate. A series of videos explaining the process of appealing a property tax assessment is available on the BOE's website at www.boe.ca.gov/info/AssessmentVideo/AppealAssessmentIndex.html.

Many California taxpayers know that property tax increases are limited by law, but tax bills can vary greatly under certain circumstances.

Proposition 13 (1978) limits annual property tax increases to 2 percent. However, many homeowners sought temporary reductions of their tax bills—a process allowed by Proposition 8 (1978)—when housing values plummeted during the housing crash. The values of many properties in California were temporarily reduced by percentages much larger than 2 percent. The 2 percent limitation under Proposition 13 does not apply to values under Proposition 8. Now that property values are recovering, property taxes may be increased to reflect a new current market value or to restore the prior Proposition 13 value (including the 2 percent increases), whichever is lower. While increases after a Proposition 8 reduction may exceed 2 percent, a property's assessed value may never go higher than its value under Proposition 13, even when the current market value increases beyond the Proposition 13 value.

Different rules apply when a property is sold, undergoes new construction, or is damaged in a natural disaster or other calamity. County assessors are required to value properties after those events, and tax bills can vary without regard to any previous assessed value.

Taxpayers who wish to appeal the assessed value of their properties can do so by filing an Application for Changed Assessment, form BOE-305-AH, with their county clerk of the board. Contact information for all 58 county assessors can be found on the BOE's website at www.boe.ca.gov/proptaxes/assessors.htm.

BOE CHAIRMAN SAYS PERMANENT SCAFFOLDING A POKE IN THE EYE TO BOE EMPLOYEES

The Department of General Services (DGS) will purchase scaffolding to replace the rented scaffolding surrounding the perimeter at the Board of Equalization's (BOE) 450 N

Street building in Sacramento. Due to the expiration of the contract with the current fencing vendor, DGS has made the decision to purchase new scaffolding instead of renewing the contract.

"The scaffolding purchase is penny-wise and pound-foolish. By officially making the scaffolding permanent, DGS is disregarding the need of our employees to vacate the 450 N Street building for a better and more productive work environment," said BOE Chairman Jerome E. Horton. "This purchase also says that DGS continues to be willing to throw good money after bad to repair an irreparably broken building."

The BOE building has been plagued with issues. The state has already spent roughly $60 million taxpayer dollars on building repairs and remediation. Total cost related to repairs and relocation during construction is estimated at approximately $115 million, which does not include lost employee productivity.

Currently, the legislature is considering a measure (Assembly Bill 1656) that will authorize DGS, "in consultation with the State Board of Equalization, to enter into one or more agreements for the planning, design, construction and acquisition of facilities, including any improvements, betterments and related facilities, and to enter into a lease-purchase or a lease with an option to purchase, for the relocation and consolidation of the State Board of Equalization."

"While erecting scaffolding around the outside of the HQ building will hopefully continue to protect the pedestrians below from falling glass, DGS misses the point entirely. The Legislature needs to recognize we have a serious issue here," Chairman Horton said. "Maintaining scaffolding around the building does not protect the state from the ever increasing number of lawsuits filed by BOE employees forced to work inside the building. We have to relocate these affected BOE Employees and consolidate our operations."

About 1,900 employees are working in the N Street headquarters building. There are approximately 750 other capital-based employees who work in satellite offices throughout the Sacramento area. AB 1656 would seek to consolidate all of these employees on one campus, increasing efficiency and productivity.

STUDY LINKS AUTISTIC BEHAVIORS TO ENZYME

Fragile X syndrome (FXS) is a genetic disorder that causes obsessive-compulsive and repetitive behaviors, and other behaviors on the autistic spectrum, as well as cognitive deficits. It is the most common inherited cause of mental impairment and the most common cause of autism.

Now biomedical scientists at the University of California, Riverside have published a study that sheds light on the cause of autistic behaviors in FXS. Appearing online today (July 23) in the Journal of Neuroscience, and highlighted also on the cover in this week's print issue of the journal, the study describes how MMP-9, an enzyme, plays a critical role in the development of autistic behaviors and synapse irregularities, with potential implications for other autistic spectrum disorders.

MMP-9 is produced by brain cells. Inactive, it is secreted into the spaces between cells of the brain, where it awaits activation. Normal brains have quite a bit of inactive MMP-9, and the activation of small amounts has significant effects on the connections between neurons, called synapses. Too much MMP-9 activity causes synapses in the brain to become unstable, leading to functional deficits.

"Our study targets MMP-9 as a potential therapeutic target in Fragile X and shows that genetic deletion of MMP-9 favorably impacts key aspects of FXS-associated anatomical alterations and behaviors in a mouse model of Fragile X," said Iryna Ethell, a professor of biomedical sciences in the UC Riverside School of Medicine, who co-led the study. "We found that too much MMP-9 activity causes synapses to become unstable, which leads to functional deficits that depend on where in the brain that occurs."

Ethell explained that mutations in FMR1, a gene, have been known for more than a decade to cause FXS, but until now it has been unclear how these mutations cause unstable synapses and characteristic physical features of this disorder. The new findings expand on earlier work by the research group that showed that an MMP-9 inhibitor, minocycline, can reduce behavioral aspects of FXS, which then led to its use to treat FXS.

To further establish a causative role for MMP-9 in the development of FXS-associated features, including autistic behaviors, the authors generated mice that were missing both FMR1 and MMP-9. They found that while mice with a single FMR1 mutation showed autistic behaviors and macroorchidism (abnormally large testes), mice that also lacked MMP-9 showed no autistic behaviors.

"Our work points directly to MMP-9 over-activation as a cause for synaptic irregularities in FXS, with potential implications for other autistic spectrum disorders and perhaps Alzheimer's disease," said Doug Ethell, the head of Molecular Neurobiology at the Western University of Health Sciences, Pomona, Calif., and a co-author on the study.

The research paper represents many years of bench work and effort by a dedicated team led by the Ethells. The work was primarily done in mice, but human tissue samples were also analyzed, with findings found to be consistent. Specifically, the work involved assessing behaviors, biochemistry, activity and anatomy of synaptic connections in the brain of a mouse model of FXS, as well as the creation of a new mouse line that lacked both the FXS gene and MMP-9.

FXS affects both males and females, with females often having milder symptoms than males. It is estimated that about 1 in 5,000 males are born with the disorder.

The Ethells were joined in the study by UCR's Harpreet Sidhu (first author of the research paper), Lorraine E. Dansie, and Peter Hickmott. Sidhu and Dansie are neuroscience graduate students; Hickmott is an associate professor of psychology.

Next, the researchers plan to understand how MMP-9 regulates synapse stability inside the neurons. They also plan to find drugs that specifically target MMP-9 without side effects such as new tetracycline derivatives that are potent inhibitors of MMP-9 but lack antibiotic properties.

"Although minocycline was successfully used in clinical trial in FXS, it has some side effects associated with its antibiotic properties, such as gastrointestinal irritation," Iryna Ethell said. "We, therefore, plan to test new non-antibiotic minocycline derivatives. These compounds lack antibiotic activity but still act as non-competitive inhibitors of MMP-9 similar to minocycline."

The research was funded by grants from the FRAXA Research Foundation, the National Institutes of Health and the California Institute for Regenerative Medicine. TPR

If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same Lender may hold more than one mortgage or Deed of Trust on the property.
